Texas onion crop looks bright for 2018

BY TAD THOMPSON | MARCH 09, 2018

EDINBURG, TX — The Texas onion crop “looks good,” according to Don Ed Holmes, the owner of The Onion House LLC, based in Weslaco, TX. The crop is smaller than a year ago, he added.

“We will harvest in the last week of March and ship in the first week of April,” he said March 3. “We will ship until the second or third week of May.”

Jimmy Bassetti, president of J&D Produce Inc. in Edinburg, TX, said his Texas onion crop “looks healthy. The stands look great! We look forward to a good (Texas) onion season.”

J&D was very much already in onions when The Produce News stopped by J&D in early February. J&D was finishing Peruvian onions and moving into Mexico, shipping its proprietary HoneySweets from Mexico in mid- to late February. “In Mexico, like everyone else, we’ve had great weather, good quality, good yields and good markets.”

Bret Erickson, general manager of J&D said, “Our only concern is if Mexico collides with Texas.”

Holmes said western onion shippers thought their crop was short, so shipment volume was conservative in December and January. As of early March, western onions lingered in the national pipeline when normally “they should be out of the way. But there was an overlap with Mexico.”
